

Anglia Research was established by managing director Peter Turvey, a professional genealogist of almost 40 years' standing. Anglia Research sets the standard for probate genealogy and heir location.

Public Sector

When relatives have to be found

We work with local authorities and other public bodies, finding the missing relatives of those who die intestate within their boundaries. We also act as tracing agents, locating property owners or their heirs in order to bring empty homes back into use.

Our probate genealogy services are provided free of charge to the public sector. We earn our fees through reaching commission agreements with any heirs we locate.

Free, fast and failsafe

- We employ more accredited genealogists* and legally qualified graduates than any other UK probate research company. The calibre of our team means that we find relatives fast and, crucially, we do not cut corners.
- Our compliance director is a solicitor whose working life has been in and around local government and whose legal specialism since 1992 has been in public sector related law. Her detailed knowledge means that we are equipped to protect your good reputation as carefully as we protect our own.
